

The minor in ethnomusicology provides students with opportunities to study music in and as culture. Students engage with a variety of musical practices, including popular, traditional, and art musics from around the world, utilizing a range of methods for studying music and demonstrating the relevance of music in multiple areas of life. This minor consists of 24 credits and can be completed in two years. It includes coursework in ethnomusicology, musicology, and/or anthropology, as well as participation in Lamont’s world music ensembles.

This program does not require experience on a musical instrument, and there is no audition needed for admission.

Interested students should contact Professor Sarah Morelli (Sarah.Morelli@du.edu), Chair of Musicology and Ethnomusicology.
